

Figure H.1. The percentage of published positive results that are false-positive errors in a field of empirical research as a function of the percentage of studied research hypotheses that are true in the field under the assumptions discussed in the text. The vertical and horizontal gray lines illustrate the example discussed in the text. The graph is based on ideas introduced by Jager and Leek (2014).